SUBMARINE WAR

German Claims 161 Ships Destroyed in August.

Berlin, Sept. 17. (by Wireless to Sayville.)—The destruction by German submarines from Sept. 3 to Sept. 11 of twenty-six merchant vessels of hostile belligerents, with tonnage aggregating 26,222, in the English Channel and on the Atlantic, was announced today in an Overseas News Agency statement.

In addition, according to the announcement seven neutral vessels with a total tonnage of 10,669 were sunk "according to prize law because they carried contraband to England or France."

The statement lists the names of several of the British and Italian steamers sunk, these including the British steamers Gorrage, of 5,936 tons, and Radie of 3,341 tons.

"During August," said an official Admiralty statement issued today, "126 hostile merchant ships, totaling 170,679 tons gross, were destroyed by submarines of the Central Powers or by mines, and thirty-five neutral merchant ships, totaling 38,568 tons, carrying contraband of war to enemies."

Huh!

The bear's a foolish brute, I'm told. He has a coat to wear. But even when the weather's cold You'll find he's always bear.

Queer!

"You might as well admit your guilt," said the detective. "The man whose house you broke into positively identifies you as the burglar."

"That's funny," said the burglar. "What's funny?" asked the detective.

"How could he identify me when he had his head under the bedclothes all the time I was in his room?" asked the burglar.

On the Aisle.

The bald-headed man is knocked, I know. Of jokes he bears the brunt. But advertise a girlie show And he'll get to the front.

Flora.

"Have you noticed our flora about here?" asked the professor of botany to the new student.

"If you mean the one with white spots, I have," replied the student who had an eye for girls. —Mechanica

Why Elephants Fear Mice.

It seems almost incredible that so small and harmless an animal as a mouse is able to frighten an elephant almost out of his senses, yet one little mouse in the hay on which they are feeding will stampede an entire herd. In the elephants' native land there are little animals known as chacnans, which feed on a small sour berry of which elephants are very fond.

They live in settlements, something after the manner of prairie dogs, under the berry bushes, and sometimes, when feeding, the elephants trample upon the little towns, and the chacnans in their fright frequently run up the tubes of the elephants' trunks.

Their long, sharp claws catch in the flesh, and they cannot be ejected. The more violently the monster blows through its trunk the more firmly the hooked claws of the little animal become imbedded in the flesh, and inflammation and death are the result. In captivity, therefore, the elephants think they are in danger of the deadly chacnans when they see a mouse and show signs of great fear.

More Labor Than You Thought.

To write a single letter of the alphabet, it is roughly estimated, requires from 200,000 to 300,000 distinct processes, all of which are controlled and directed by the mind. To make the letter O, for instance, takes but a second, yet if all the mental processes involved had to be performed consciously years would be consumed in the performance. First, the making of the O is willed in the brain, setting in motion the activities of thousands of cells in the hearing areas, the seeing areas, the speech motor areas and the muscular motor areas. Hundreds of nerve threads connecting these cells with various cells and nerve threads in the brain are set to work to organize the movement, while other nerve centers attend to the business of furnishing the requisite amount of blood. As a result, the spinal centers are actuated, and finally the smaller nerves in the fingers direct the forming of the O.

A Paradox.

"You seem to have traveled quite a lot," remarked the landlady to the star boarder. "Which of the countries that you have visited would you prefer to make your home if you had a choice?" "Patagonia," replied the star boarder. "And why Patagonia?" asked the landlady.

"Prunes cost $2 a pound in Patagonia," replied the star boarder.

Advice.

My son, heed this advice today: You'll find it is hard fact: Remember that the less you say The less you need retract.

Economy.

"Marriage makes a lot of changes in a man," remarked Mrs. Gabb. "That's right," growled Mr. Gabb. "After he has been married for awhile a man gets so he laughs five cent cigars are as good as ten cent ones."

The Text and the Sermon.

Some men are always being stung. And to have luck are prone. But any man who holds his tongue Is sure to hold his own.

See above. There are sound logic, much wit, mighty good advice and some poetry in the lines we have placed at the head of the editorial column of the Wapakoneta Daily News this evening; and because we didn't know where else to look for inspiration we turned to Luke McLaure's funny column, and our needs were at once supplied. There is little need of any person being stung if he follows the suggestions laid down in such a neat manner by Dr. McLaure, and if a man will keep well within himself and his hand upon his pocketbook the blue sky larks will have to seek other employment than that of plucking the unwary and greedily gullible. Few persons ever get stung who are not bent on doing a little plucking themselves; hence they get mighty little sympathy when it becomes noised about that they have been plucked.—Wapakoneta (O.) News.

Ouch!

He was too blundering inquisitive; Let's kick in for a wreath; He saw a moving burrass, and He tried to pick its teeth.

Derivation.

"Dyspepsia," remarked the student of etymology, "comes from the Greek." "Not always," replied the man who had it. "I got mine in a French restaurant."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Already Disciplined.

"I envy Margaret for having married a steel man."

"Why so?"

"Because a steel man must be well tempered."—Baltimore American.
